Koivisto Isles Surrendered to Reds, Finns Say

Helsinki Admits Russians Take Over Strategic Coast Batteries On End of Mannerheim Line; Gives Soviet Better Chance In Viipuri Drive.

(By Associated Press)

HELSINKI — The Finnish high command today acknowledged that Finland had surrendered to invading Russians the strategic islands of Koivisto, armed with great coastal batteries anchoring the western end of the Mannerheim line.

These islands, situated off the town of Koivisto, are 20 miles south of Viipuri, lying in the Gulf of Finland near the entrance to Viipuri bay.

(Possession of the islands presumably would give the Russians a new advantage in their drive on Viipuri, normally Finland's third largest city, by aiding an attack from the sea as well as from land.)

Russian land forces already have driven on the isthums itself up a railway toward Viipuri as far as Kaislahti, only 7½ miles due south of Viipuri, according to the Finns' own admission. The Russians apparently are cleaning up the area between the railway and the coast

"On the isthmus our troops have given up the Koivisto islands," said today's daily army communique "On Feb. 25 the enemy continued his attacks on the western part of the isthmus The attacks were checked by fire from our artillery and infantry, and the enemy suffered heavy loss in men"

4,000 Killed Daily.

Meanwhile Soviet Russia has lost 100,000 men, by the estimate of a foreign military observer in bending the Mannerheim line enough to threaten Viipuri

This observer says that 4,000 Red soldiers killed has been the average price exacted daily for the gains that have carried Russia's hammer-and-sickle banner since the start of the big push Feb 1 to a point within a few miles of Viipuri

Finland's aggregate loss has not been disclosed

The Red army has exerted the greatest pressure on the western extremity of the Karelian isthmus front, the Gulf of Finland end, with the result that Finns acknowledge a spearhead within eight miles of Viipuri, in peacetime Finland's third largest city with a population of about 74,000.

(The Leningrad headquarters of the Red army announced Saturday night that occupation not only of Koivisto, but also the neighboring strongly fortified islands of Tiurmsaari and Prisaari, had been completed.

WELLES, CIANO MEET IN ROME

Roosevelt's Special Envoy on European Problems to See Duce Later Today.

BULLETIN

ROME—(AP)—Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles conferred with Premier Mussolini today after a "long and cordial" chat in the morning with Mussolini's son-in-law and foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano.

(By Associated Press)

ROME—Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's special investigator of European problems, conferred for an hour and a quarter today with Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and said they had "a very gratifying and helpful conversation."

Five minutes after Welles left the foreign office, Ciano went to the Plazzo Venezia to report to Premier Mussolini on the discussion, Welles' first on a tour of the chief capitals of Europe.

The United States undersecretary of state was scheduled to see Il Duce himself during the day.

Italians were much impressed with the length of time Ciano and Welles talked and said they believed they had made a deep examination of the problems confronting them.

Ciano also appeared to have been pleased by the conversation. He lingered 15 minutes over his farewells to President Roosevelt's special envoy and William Phillips, United States ambassador to Italy, Welles' only companion at the meeting.

The foreign secretary shook hands with each of his American visitors four times.

It was announced that Pope Pius XII would receive Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal emissary to the vatican, tomorrow for presentation of his credentials

(The United States and the vatican do not have diplomatic relations, and Taylor, instead of being United States ambassador, is the president's personal envoy).

Taylor, top-hatted and in morning clothes, paid an informal call on Luigi Cardinal Maglione, Papal secretary of state. He was accompanied by Monsignor Joseph Hurley of Cleveland, American member of the vatican secretariat of state.

Enraged Divorced Husband's Shots Miss Ex-Mate But Son, Daughter Die.

(By United Press)

AKRON — Two small children were killed and two men were wounded seriously early today in a shooting affair that Akron police attributed to a divorced husband's jealous rage

Mary Jane Faulk, 2½ years old, was killed by a bullet fired into her brain as she lay asleep in her crib beside her two dolls Her seven-year-old brother, Warren, died at 1 05 a. m. in an Akron hospital

Police said the children were shot by their father, Russell Faulk, a laborer, shortly after midnight.

Frank Bender, a farmer and aviator of Ira, O., who had spent the evening with Mrs. Floy Faulk, Russell's divorced wife, was wounded in the neck and left shoulder. He was in fair condition in a hospital.

According to police, Faulk then shot himself in the head with his 25 caliber automatic pistol. His condition was reported to be critical.

Mrs. Faulk, at whose home the shooting occurred, was uninjured.

Bender, after being shot, ran to his automobile and drove to police headquarters, where he collapsed. He managed to say: "Go to 187 Wheeler street. There's been a murder"

Fired Several Shots.

Mrs. Faulk told officers her former husband had fired several shots at her and Bender and then gone upstairs to shoot the children

According to authorities, Faulk had encountered his former wife and Bender earlier in the evening at the Land of Dance, a dance hall south of Akron, and had left them after an argument. Faulk was reported to have threatened them

The Faulks were divorced a year ago

Faulk was said to have returned to his home in Akron, where he got his son, Warren. Then they went to Mrs. Faulk's home and awaited her return.

When the coupe returned, Warren was sent upstairs and the shooting followed.

British Dismayed As Airways Line Drops Bermuda Flights

NEW YORK Pan-American Airways decision to drop Bermuda as a stopping place after March 15 on the eastward trans-Atlantic flights of its big clipper ships today dismayed British officials in the United States who saw in it a possible partial breaking of the Allied blockade of Germany

By circumventing Bermuda the clippers can fly to Lisbon Portugal and there connect with an Italian air line to Rome and thus according to the fears of British officials possibly open a new channel for the transmission of financial aid to the Nazis

The Pan-American announcement made no mention of the recent outburst of congressional indignation over action of the British in making seizure of American mail destined for Germany aboard the clippers and subjecting it to confiscation and censorship

Improved weather reporting service chiefly by two coast guard vessels the Duane and Bibb, stationed in mid-Atlantic to radio the latest weather reports a service which foreign flag vessels have discontinued because of the war, has made it unnecessary to stop at Bermuda Pan-American Airways explained

Says Trade Plan Would 'Ruin' West

Wheeler Declares Pacts Would Hit Cattle And Mining Interests.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON —(INS)— A democratic warning that the Roosevelt-Hull reciprocal trade treaties mean "ruin" for the west today touched off a sharp senate battle over house-approved legislation to extend the administration's trade-pacts making power for three years

Senator Wheeler (D) Montana charged the treaties 'could do nothing but harm or ruin" mining cattle, lumber and farm interests of the west He predicted it would "go hard" with any western senators seeking re-election who supported the treaty program He discounted heavily administrative claims of strength for the extension resolution

"The vote in the senate will be close," said the Montanan. "We may be able to pass an amendment requiring senate ratification of the treaties.

Wheeler's admonition came as the senate finance committee opened public hearings on the extension measure and summoned Secretary of State Cordell Hull as first witness Committee Chairman Harrison (D) Mississippi, hopes to conclude hearings in a week

Echoed by other western Democrats, Wheeler's words encouraged opposition forces to strive for adoption of the ratification amendment, regarded by administration leaders as tantamount to defeat of the extension

New Deal Checks Up.

The New Deal's private senate poll tallies 49 votes to defeat the impending ratification amendment, 41 supporting it, and 6 in doubt. Wheeler questioned these figures and Senator Schwellenbach (D.) Washington, who is normally found backing administration policies, said.

"I don't know how they get all those votes, if the administration leaders are counting me as anything but doubtful on the entire trade treaty extension proposition they're under a grave misapprehension"

CHAPTER IV.

Star led the way to the writing room and Mamie gazed at the array of books, magazines and autographed photographs which seemed to fill the room.

"My, she must have a lot of friends!" she commented, sinking into the writer's swivel chair. "Who's this one?"

She was pointing to the single photograph the desk contained.

"That's her son," Star explained. "He's just graduated from the university."

"Does her live with her?" Mamie inquired.

"Not just now. He's trying to get a position in New York. That's where he would like to live." Star's voice was reluctant. She did not want her mother to know any more about Mrs. Lambert than was absolutely necessary, but it would have seemed rude not to answer such a simple question. Mamie seemed to have calmed down since they had entered the room. She lifted the hat from her prematurely gray hair and Star thought with a lump in her throat that her mother really was rather pretty. If she would only be more fastidious, she could be a good-looking woman. But Mamie dressed for the grand effect with no regard for detail, always thinking of herself as "dramatic" and "colorful."

"Looks like a nice kid," she continued with the picture of Nina's son still in her hand. "A little on the plump side like his mother, but good-looking in spite of it. Too bad he doesn't live here."

"Why?" Star asked, remembering what Nina had told her about never losing one's temper no matter how great the provocation.

"You two might make a match of it," giggled Mamie fanning herself with a magazine. "Say, when is the old lady going to bring up those drinks? Or was that just an excuse to get rid of me?"

"I hear her coming now," Star answered ignoring the first part of her mother's remark. "Put the picture back where it was, Mother, Please! Wouldn't you rather sit over here? I think it will be more comfortable."

"I'll sit where I am," Mamie decreed.

The housekeeper entered carrying two tall glasses on a tray. Mamie gulped from hers greedily as Star said, "Thank you, Mrs. Epperson."

The housekeeper glanced at her sympathetically and left the room.

When she had gone Star added, "You shouldn't have come here, Mother. You really shouldn't. If you wanted to see me I could have come home."

"You've been gone over a month," Mamie said significantly.

"I didn't think it mattered to you," the girl confessed as the hot color stained her cheeks.

"Of course it matters," Mamie declared reproachfully. "Aren't you my own flesh and blood?"

"Sometimes I wonder," Star said soberly.

Mamie laughed.

"Well, you weren't adopted, if that is what's bothering you."

The girl leaned forward eagerly hoping that since her mother was in a more reasonable mood than usual she might answer her never answered question.

"Who was my father?"

"His name was Bright. Donald Bright."

"But who was he? What did he do? Where did he live? Where is he now?"

"I've told you a hundred times," Mamie cried, exasperated. "He's dead now and what difference does it make what he used to do? He wasn't any good."

There was no use antagonizing her mother and causing another scene. But Star could vaguely remember her father buttoning her into her coat and kissing her as if he loved her. He was good to her and to her mother. Star would never believe otherwise.

"I need some money," Mamie confided. "Since you're working at such a swell job you ought to be willing to help me out a little now and then."

"I don't make very much," Star said truthfully.

"Neither does Joe," Mamie retorted. "Business has fallen off terribly this summer and considering all that he's done for you...."

So this was the reason for her call. "I might have known it," Star thought but she rose to get her pocketbook, saying, "I haven't much left. But you can have what there is."

She emptied it into Mamie's outstretched hand feeling more depressed than she had since she had started working. What was the use? How could she ever get ahead if Mamie started hounding her for money? Yet how could she refuse? It wasn't fair, but what could she do?

"It certainly isn't much," Mamie agreed. "But it will help. Well, I guess I'll be going. It's a nice soft place you've found for yourself, Star, but you'd have made more money if you had taken my advice."

Star smiled.

"You talk as if a job were just waiting for me."

"Maybe it was," her mother said. "Joe's got friends who could have helped plenty He was just waiting for you to get out of school."

"I don't want the kind of job Joe's friends would offer me," Star declared.

"You might not be so sure of that," Mamie countered, putting on her hat, "if you knew who Joe's friends are."

"I don't want to know." Star told herself vehemently. The mysterious way her stepfather made his living was reason enough to suspect his friends. She accompanied her mother down the stairs, and this time Mamie departed peaceably. Star breathed a sigh of relief. The scene had shaken all the poise Nina had helped her acquire. Mamie's temper was so uncertain Star never could tell when she might have an outburst. She felt confused and unhappy, embarrassed and ashamed. Slipping back to her room, she lay down upon the bed and buried her flushed face in the cool, white pillows.

Twilight fell outside the drawn shades. Nina's guests left and presently there came the sound of footsteps and a knock upon the door.

"What are you doing, moping up here alone?" Nina inquired cheerfully.

She thought she had never seen anything so beautiful as that white face with its cloud of dark hair.

"I was just tired," Star replied, but her voice betrayed her.

Nina sat down at the side of the bed.

"Listen, my dear, I'm awfully fond of you, and I'm going to give you some advice. I know how you feel, I heard what happened this afternoon, but don't let it get you down. No matter what your environment has been you can rise above it. You have beauty and brains. An unbeatable combination. Even in the short time you've been with me you've learned enough to be at ease anywhere. Associate with any one. Marry any one . . ."

Star cried gratefully, "Oh, Mrs. Lambert, do you really mean that? You're not saying it just because you're sorry for me?"

Nina laughed.

"Listen, if I looked as you I'd give up everything I've worked a lifetime to obtain. Sorry? For you? Get out of this bed and get busy. I'd like to finish that chapter before dinner."

CHILDREN'S Frequent COLDS

✓ For relieving discomforts of chest colds and night coughs, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, and back at bedtime. VapoRub's poultice-vapor action relieves congestion of upper air passages—eases soreness of chest and back muscles—helps the youngster relax into healing sleep.

✓ For coughing and irritated throat caused by colds, put VapoRub on the child's tongue to relieve the irritation. Then massage VapoRub on throat and chest.

✓ For "sniffles" and misery of head colds, melt VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water. Have the child breathe in the steaming vapors. This loosens phlegm, clears air passages, makes breathing easier. Also massage VapoRub on throat and chest. Millions of families use these three time-tested treatments.

Easy to See How Much Vendol Helped This Mansfield Man

Filling Station Proprietor says friends are amazed at great changes since he gave favorite medicine thorough trial.

MR. T. I. "TEDDY" COLEMAN

"There is no doubt as to how much Vendol benefitted me because my friends often noticed it and remark on my improved looks," said Mr. T. I. "Teddy" Coleman who owns the popular Cities Service filling station and resides at 1062 Park Ave., Mansfield, in a conversation recently with the Vendol Man who is daily at Central Drug Store introducing and explaining all about this great compound of Nature's Roots and Herbs with Mild Alkalines.

"When I began taking Vendol a few weeks ago I had been constipated for years, and here recently this condition has been bad and caused such sharp pains to appear in my back, arms, legs, and shoulders that seemed every move I made sent pains shooting all over my body.

"In addition to these troubles the constipation made me feel nervous and quivery sometimes and my sleep was so restless that many mornings I'd awaken feeling all "washed out." This condition kept my stomach all upset and after many meals I'd feel full and bloated with gas, sourness, and acid risings.

"Hearing so much about Vendol and the good results many people here in our home town were getting from it, I decided to give it a trial so got some along with the little Vendol laxative tablets.

"It didn't keep me waiting long to see results. Very soon it had my bowels moving thoroughly yet nice and smoothly, and with this satisfying action I soon felt better than for a long time.

"Now, I enjoy grand relief from the pains in the muscles of my arms, shoulders, legs, and across my back. This relief from constipation also brought quiet to my nerves and I enjoy my sleep like I did when I was a youngster. I enjoy my meals too, with no more gas, bloating, or sour stomach.

"I really feel like a different person and give all credit for my relief to Vendol, and I advise everyone in the same condition I was in, to start Vendol and see for themselves what it will do."

You are invited to talk freely with the Vendol Man at Central Drug Stotre, Corner Main & 4th Streets, without obligation, but give Vendol a chance to help you as it has so many all around here. Get Vendol today from most any druggist.

The encore selections were "Little Old Lady" by Carmichael-Deis and "Sylvia" by Speaks-Deis.

Charm and talent were exemplified by the formally clad women when they appeared on the platform and sang the program.

PLEA REFUSED

BOULDER, Colo. —(U.P.)— Refusal of the Associated Students of the University of Colorado, leading student body organization, to support the Finnish Relief Fund drive, won the sanction and praise of Robert L. Stearns, president of the university. President Stearns ordered contribution boxes for the fund removed from campus buildings after the association announced it believed the slogan "help save Democracy by helping Finland" to be merely a repetition of the "glittering propaganda offered America in the last war."

Informally Speaking...

February 26, 1940.

Lucy, dear:

Marianne

While sitting on the inside looking out, this day had all appearances of being a lovely one—and it was, I guess, except that it was far too cold, with the mercury staying much too close to zero for comfort outdoors. . . . But then, we can console ourselves by looking forward to the fact that the beginning of spring is less than a month away—officially, that is, so we'll hope the weatherman is aware of that fact too, eh Lucy?

* * * * *

Some folks have the nicest things happen to them, and Carolyn Finefrock is one of those lucky persons. . . . You remember my telling you of the trip she took with her mother, Mrs. John H. Finefrock, and her sister, Virginia, recently—they went down to Florida, where, among other points of interest, they visited with their son and brother, Don, who's at Venice (winter quarters of Kentucky Military Institute) now. . . . Well, just as if a trip to Florida wasn't enough for anybody in one winter, Carolyn received a beautiful diamond engagement ring from Rupert Beckstett of Lakewood upon her return from the south last Sunday. . . . And then yesterday her mother gave an informal announcement tea for her. . . . The way they announced the engagement was cute too, Lucy—Martha Diamond (a friend of Carolyn's from Cleveland) opened a packet of matches to find—not mere matches—but matches covered with a little white piece of paper, painted with a picture of a bride and the words, "Announcing a Match—Carolyn and Rupert." . . . Green and white predominated in the tea refreshments, when the ice cream was molded into the shape of diamond engagement rings.

* * * * *

Joy Herbert has returned from a three-weeks' vacation at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.—where he got in a good half-dozen games of golf. . . . Mrs. Herbert and the children, Jay and Joy Ann, are staying on down there until about the first of April. . . . Mrs. J. D. McLeod and her sons, Johnny and Neil, are there with them.

* * * * *

LAST evening was an important one for Elaine Schiller. . . . She's a student at Seton Hill college, you know, and she sang two solos during a school recital. . . . The program, which was presented in Cecilian Hall at the college, included piano solos and duets as well as vocal selections, and Elaine sang "My Heart Ever Faithful" by Bach and Strauss' "Allerseelen" . . . Elaine, who's the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stanley C. Schiller, is a junior at the Greensburg, Pa. college.

* * * * *

Mrs. Ella B. Chase wrote in a recent letter that she and Helen Brown had met Mrs. Frances W. Scattergood in St. Petersburg, Fla. . . . Mrs. Chase and Miss Brown went down to the sunshine state by train several weeks ago, and after visiting around at many places of interest, they've decided to spend the remainder of their vacation in St. Petersburg.

* * * * *

FACT is, there are lots of Mansfielders down there now. . . . Mr. and Mrs. C. L. VanDerau have joined Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Johnston in Jacksonville. . . . W. L. Buchan is vacationing in that city and Tampa. . . . Incidentally, Mr. Buchan's sister-in-law, Mrs. Eloise Buchan, has gone to Arizona to visit with friends and relatives there until the middle of next month.

* * * * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Thompson had a grand time last Friday night, Lucy. . . . They motored to Columbus, where they attended the formal ball of the Aladdin Shrine at the Masonic temple. . . . Mrs. Thompson says it was a lovely and colorful affair with 3000 persons present and 1500 in the grand march.

* * * * *

ALL of which seems to wind up the news for today, Lucy, so write soon, and I'll send you an answer next week.

Lovingly,

Marianne

Following a show in the afternoon, Miss Josephine Keith of Toledo and Mrs. Robert Keith entertained the group with dinner at the Towne House. The table was centered with a bouquet of roses, which was presented to the honoree with a shower of handkerchiefs. Other table appointments were in blue and yellow. The birthday cake was on a musical plate, which played "Happy Birthday to You."

Study Types When Choosing Wife

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

If you find yourself slipping, falling more and more in love with every breath you take—stop, look, listen, the next time you are overtaken by a "safe and sane" interval.

For love has been diagnosed as ecstatic madness, and the deeper and harder you fall the fewer and farther apart will become your lucid intervals.

If you're a steady, plodding sort of fellow, with an underlying streak of seriousness, and who enjoys watching his savings grow, beware the flashing charmer who carries all before her like a racing yacht, full sail, on a winning breeze. She'll be hard to resist.

Write a poem about her perhaps, or a short story which, of course, will never be published, but it will help clear your mind. Next, go in quest of a different type.

Try to find a girl who likes the same things you do, one who will enjoy pampering the little bank book and seeing it grow tall and put on weight. A girl with an under-current of seriousness who reads the news in the daily papers before she turns to the society column. A girl to whom you can talk and discuss your hobbies, one who will be satisfied to stay home evenings instead of wanting to go places. The girl whose tastes are domestic and who will not be above sewing on your buttons and darning your socks.

If you are an intelligent man, don't fall for a stupid girl—even if she knows how to cook. Good meals are a prime requisite of happy married life, but spiritual refreshment is as necessary as the well-balanced ration. To marry a girl who wouldn't know what you are talking about, when you're talking well and know it, is fatal to happiness.

The cards seemed stacked against the man or the woman, as the case may be, in an unhappy marriage. A girl is a swell dancer, or pretty, or has fascinating little ways about her, or contrariwise, a man seems to have a heart of gold because he turns off a few stock sentiments, or seems to be one of those strong, silent men, when he's just plain dumb. And before you know it, they've both been bitten by the "ecstatic madness."

The only way to insure contentment in the marriage is to study the type of girl or man you find attractive in one of your most lucid intervals.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"Well! I'm here," I said banally, forcing a smile.

"Will you tell him, or shall I?" Queen Olga asked, then turned in explanation to Mr. Veritzen without waiting for me to answer.

"You see, I alreay have voiced my theory to Madge," she said, "and she advised me to ask you about it, as I meant to do anyway," she added with a charming and distinctly unregal smile.

"I shall be very glad to listen to either of you," he said.

I was glad of the opportunity Olga gave me when she said prettily:

"Won't you tell him what I asked you, Madge-" she pleaded. "I'm afraid I'll get it all mixed up."

"Of course," I said promptly, and involuntarily squared my shoulders as I faced Philip Veritzen.

"Olga knows," I began, "that my father is very sure the emeralds did not go to the bottom of the ocean during that fight upon the pirate ship. The bodies of the men who went overboard during the fight were searched, and divers were sent down to search the ocean floor in that vicinity. My father thinks they are now in the possession of some one of the men who escaped that night, but Olga asked me if there was not the possibility of the necklace already having been taken to pieces and the emeralds distributed to fences in widely different locations."

"I think it very likely," Philip Veritzen commented as I paused, but his face spelled very different words. I could almost hear the echo of one of Mary's slangy comments: "So what?"

"That's what I thought," I said quickly, "and Olga w ondered if it wouldn't be possible to make inquiries of leading jewelers here and abroad if they recently had bought or had been offered emeralds of unusual size and value."

"Wouldn't that be feasible, Phil?" Olga asked, and at her words, I saw suspicion wiped from his face and knew that he was accepting our theory at its face value.

"Entirely feasible," he said, "except for one thing. Single stones out of a necklace or tiara are extremely hard to identify except by experts. If the jeweler who sold them to you could undertake the job, I shall be happy to negotiate with him for you."

But Olga's reply was as hopeshattered as it was prompt.

"I don't need my jeweler," she said. "Any trustworthy man who can remember marks drawn for him on a piece of paper will do."

Philip Veritzen's voice was suddenly sharp—but unintentionally so, I knew, as he voiced a question.

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"Simply," she answered quietly, "that I myself scratched a tiny mark upon each one of those stones so that I could identify them if I ever needed to do so. Each mark was different from the others, but I can remember all of them and draw them again."

Beef Borscht Old-World Treat

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

The wise cook always has on hand recipes for dishes that are simple, wholesome and easy to prepare. A good nourishing main dish, supplemented by a salad, dessert and beverage, makes dinner or lunch an easy task.

A good nourishing soup is a grand mainstay for cold weather meals. Beef Borscht is such a soup, good to look at and good to eat, and a time-saving job for cook, too. The meat and vegetable can be cooked in the morning when the household chores are being done, and reheated when ready to serve. Try this old-world recipe, brought up to date. Make it with one pound spareribs, one-half cup finely-cut parsley, two tablespoons vinegar, two teaspoons salt, two quarts water, two bunches beets (four cups shredded thin), four tablespoons vinegar, one and two-thirds cups evaporated milk. Boil spareribs, parsely, the two tablespoons vinegar and salt in water for about an hour. Add beets and continue cooking until beets are tender, about 30 to 40 minutes. Then stir the four tablespoons vinegar into the milk. Add a small amount of soup to the soured milk, mixing well, then and this mixture to the borscht and heat. This will yield about 10 servings or two and three-fourths quarts. We used this recipe for a buffet supper and found it most successful. The pink soup in an old-fashioned big soup tureen was the belle of the evening!

Good Main Course.

Salmon Souffle is another dish that is a good main course. A souffle is a thrill to make and a joy to eat. If you are one of the homemakers who has been too timid to whip up a souffle, it's time you took a chance, for there's nothing really tricky about the making. The trick is all in the baking. It's the long baking at a slow, even temperature that assures souffle success.

Here's a recipe for a grand souffle which has a glowing color and a marvelous flavor. It is an appetizing and attractive main dish for family or company meals. Enough for eight servings is made with three tablespoons butter, six tablespoons flour, one teaspoon salt, liquor from salman plus enough evaporated milk to make two cups, one pound can salmon, flaked, tablespoon lemon juice, few gratings of onion, dash of cayenne, six eggs and one-half teaspoon cream of tartar. Make a thick white sauce of butter, flour, salt and liquid. Remove bones and skin from salmon. Flake with a fork. Add to white sauce with seasonings. Beat in egg yolks, one at a time. Beat whites until foamy, add cream of tartar and continue beating until stiff but not dry. Fold into salmon mixture lightly but thoroughly. Pour into buttered baking dish. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) for about one hour.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, February 27.

A day in which the spirit and stamina will be tested through oppositions and obstacles is the omen based upon the lunar and mutual aspects. There may be stubborn situations to be met with determination and resourcefulness. It is probable that the cooperation of employers or those in power may be counted on. But the front to cope with is subtle, deeprooted and crafty, and calls for strategem or tact, not impetuosity and force. Romance figures.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year of stubborn obstacles and subtle oppositions, which may be successfully maneuvered with tact and diplomacy rather than reckless and passionate reprisals. Employers and those of influence will be found willing to support industry, merit and fidelity. Patience and constructive programs are assured promotion and gain. In purely personal relations there may be a surprising note of romance.

A child born on this day may be energetic, skilful, resourceful and persistent, winning advancement or aid of superiors by its dependable qualities. But it may be subtle and at times passionate and jealous.

The total value of Swedish crops in 1939 is 1,169,000,000 kronor, or about $292,250,000. This is an increase over 1938 of 85,000,000 kronor, or about $21,250,000.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

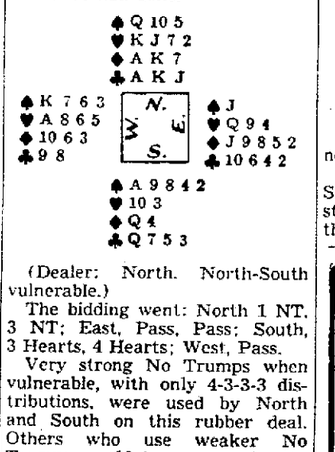
"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT TO BE TRUSTED

Dependable and trust-worthy as a bridge star's wife may be most of the time, the bridge table is no place to trust her, if she is a keen competitor and is playing against him. Then is the time that some of the nicest ladies pick out crucial spots to underlead aces and resort to other nefarious devices which enable them to laugh weeks afterward about how they got even for various things the husbands had done.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

The bidding went: North 1 NT, 3 NT; East, Pass, Pass; South, 3 Hearts, 4 Hearts; West, Pass.

Very strong No Trumps when vulnerable, with only 4-3-3-3 distributions, were used by North and South on this rubber deal. Others who use weaker No Trumps would have started with 2-No Trumps, South bidding 3-Spades, North 3-No Trumps and South 4-Spades.

One of the outstanding experts, who wants his name withheld, was declarer, and his wife led the heart 5. Expecting East to have the A but possibly not the Q, he ducked and the Q won. A heart was returned to the A and a third round ruffed. South then led the spade 2. When she played the 6, he guessed her for possibly the J but not the K, so played dummy's 10, the singleton J winning. Later, of course, he lost the setting trick to the spade K.

Her low heart lead really gave him a chance to make 6-Spades. If he came up with the K, then ran three diamonds, discarding a heart, following with the spade A and another to the Q, he would have lost only to the spade K. With normal defense and play, he would have lost only one trick in each major, making five-odd. And here he was set by his own wife.

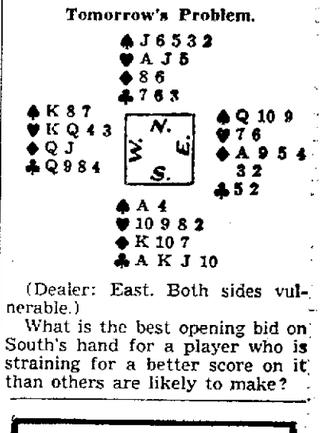
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

What is the best opening bid on South's hand for a player who is straining for a better score on it than others are likely to make?

NATION'S EYES ON OUTCOME OF 17TH ELECTION

Secretary of State Earl Griffith predicted 40,000 persons would vote in tomorrow's special election in the district, while in Mansfield county election board officials forecast a total Richland county vote of "about 10,000 if the weather is favorable." Only 4,438 persons voted in the county in the special primary Feb. 6.

Ashbrook today asked Secretary of State Earl Griffith to place "watchers" in voting booths Tuesday to guard against any attempts to "manipulate the vote count or intimidate public employes."

To his request Griffith replied that there was "no necessity" for observers, but added that "this office will exercise its usual careful scrutiny of the balloting."

He suggested that if Ashbrook desired he could put a challenger in every voting precinct. Election board officials in Mansfield said they know of no plan to do that, but explained that the county executive chairman and secretary could take such a step if they desired.

In turning down Ashbrook's request to place "watchers" at the polls election day, Griffith cited the state code which provides for the appointment of challengers and witnesses by the county Democratic or Republican committees in any precinct desired.

"This office has no evidence of intimidation of any public official and I request that you forthwith submit any violation of election laws to this office," Griffith said.

McGregor had wound up his speaking campaign today, but Ashbrook was to appear at rallies tonight at Mt. Vernon and Delaware with former Governor Martin L. Davey who has been speaking in his behalf. Davey spoke in Ashland Saturday night, devoting much of his time to a criticism of Gov. John W. Bricker.

Such state Democratic leaders as Davey, Ex-Lieutenent Governor William G. Pickrel, State Chairman Arthur Limbach, and former Secretary of State William J. Kennedy have been speaking for Ashbrook.

The administration of Gov. John W. Bricker has been solidly behind the campaign of McGregor, who is majority floor leader in the Ohio house of representatives.

State Highway Director Robert S. Beightler said today highway employes in the district would be given time off tomorrow to vote, and said he hoped they voted for McGregor "because he is a high type man."

Beightler said he was "not worried" about the threat of State Auditor Joseph Ferguson, a Democrat, to hold up the pay of workers for the day they take time out to vote.

To Ferguson's charge that 2,000 highway workers in the district had been instructed to work for McGregor, Beightler replied that there are only 500 highway workers in the district.

Leaders on both sides predicted victory, Ashbrook himself forecasting he will win by "four or five thousand votes" in the district.

Republican State Chairman Ed D. Shorr predicted victories by "substantial majorities" in both the 17th and 22nd districts where elections will be held simultaneously.

"McGregor has been elected to the legislature by his home county of Coshocton three successive times, each time piling up a larger majority," Shorr said.

The 17th district has provided all the color in the congressional campaign. In the 22nd district, usually heavily Republican, Mrs. Chester Bolton, widow of the congressman whose death left the vacancy in the district, was seeking the post. She is opposed by former Congressman Anthony Fleger, a Democrat. Mrs. Bolton made only one political speech and there was little activity on either side.

A victory for either side was less certain in the 17th district which has gone Republican in the last two general elections despite victories for the late Congressman William A. Ashbrook, a Democrat.

In 1938 Gov. Bricker polled 16,000 more votes in the district than Charles Sawyer, the Democratic nominee for governor. The special primary three weeks ago produced 2,200 more Republican than Democratic votes in the district.

midnight, answering calls for repair service.

Bolley said he was the only one in the department who had been put on for the night shift, and claimed that no provisions had been made to rotate the night work among other men in the repair department.

Locke said that he knew "nothing about" the change although he said he had suggested to Warrack some time ago that someone be kept in the water department between 4 p. m. and 6 p. m. to handle complaints.

He said Bolley had requested a vacation but that he had requested the employe to stay on the job and "get along" with his fellow workers.

Although Warrack could not be reached for a statement, it was learned that he had set up a new schedule in the repair department and that Alexander Schwab, who has also been employed as meter repairman, had been designated to work the shift from 7 a. m. to 4 p. m. and that Bolley was to take the night shift.

SNEEZES AGAIN, RETURNS TO BED

Marietta Girl Back in Hospital, After Suffering New Attack.

MARIETTA — (U.P.) — Eleven-year-old Marjorie Ruth Kaneff, who suffered from violent sneezing spells for five days last week, was back in Marietta hospital again today with another attack.

Doctors thought they had Marjorie's sneezing stopped Sunday and she was taken to the home of her father, Harold Kaneff, near Marietta. But she suffered another sneezing spasm today.

Scores of persons have offered "cures" for her sneezing but medical authorities believe she is suffering from a brain irritation. They have administered local anesthetics to relieve her.

MANTON LOSES IN HIGH COURT

Former Federal Judge Fails to Get Review of Charges of Judicial Conspiracy.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Martin T. Manton, former senior federal circuit court judge at New York, failed today to obtain a supreme court review of his conviction on a charge of conspiracy to sell judicial favors.

At the same time, the tribunal agreed to review a decision which held that a labor union which engages in a sit-down strike was not liable for damages under the 1890 Sherman anti-trust act.

In addition, the justices returned to a three-judge federal court in Florida litigation involving constitutionality of a 1935 Florida law authorizing the fixing of minimum prices—based on the cost of production—at which citrus fruit could be purchased from the growers.

Justice Roberts, who delivered the majority decision, said the three judge court "committed serious error" in holding the act unconstitutional when all that was before it was a motion for a temporary injunction to restrain enforcement of the measure.

KOIVISTO ISLES GIVEN TO REDS, HELSINKI SAYS

Russians Get Strategic Point on West End of Mannerheim Line, Finns Admit.

que, issued early today, reported occupation of 28 more defensive fortifications, bringing to 762 the total of such positions reported taken since the isthmus offensive was started. Many of these have been described as iron and concrete artillery forts"—apparently the small pillboxes with which the Mannerheim line is studded.

(The Leningrad communique, covering Sunday's operations, said Finnish forces were thrown back with "heavy losses" when they attempted several counter-attacks. Red bombing planes struck at Finnish troops "in a number of areas," the communique said, and 10 Finnish planes were brought down in combat.)

The Finns' Sunday communique, covering Saturday's operations said localized Russian attacks on the isthmus front were repulsed with "heavy casualties inflicted on the enemy" and "at least 17 tanks were destroyed."

Russians Land More Parachute Troops.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden—(U.P.)—Numerous Russian parachute troops, dropped last night behind the Mannerheim line and in the outskirts of Viipuri, have been wiped out by the Finns after fierce fighting, it was reported today.

Reliable advices had reported that Russian airplanes dropped many of the picked parachute troops over a wide area, to wreck communications, attack isolated detachments and spread propaganda—work in which they are especially trained.

A Helsinki dispatch to the newspaper Tidningen reported that the Finns had hunted down and annihilated all of the parachutists, who might have caused much danger to the Finns by their work behind the lines as infantry shock troops attacked from the front.

Neutrals Ready to Support Peace Plan.

COPENHAGEN — (U.P.) — Denmark, Norway and Sweden are prepared to support any peace move which may appear practicable as the result of Sumner Welles' visit to Europe or through any other agency, it was believed today, as the result of a conference by the Scandinavian foreign ministers here.

It was understood also that Denmark and Sweden intended to make representations to Great Britain and Germany within the next few days backing Norway in its attitude on the Altmark case and insisting that the neutrality of Scandinavian territorial waters be respected in the future.

It was indicated that the meeting of foreign ministers resulted above all in agreement that the neutral status of the Scandinavian states was so precarious that a united front must be presented in all possible instances to maintain their rights and keep them out of the European and Russo-Finnish wars.

Cites 128 Nazi Attacks On Unarmed Vessels.

LONDON — (AP) — The government today charged 128 instances of attacks by German aircraft on "unarmed British merchant ships and fishing vessels" from the start of the war up to Feb. 22.

Richard Austen Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, gave this figure in answer to a question in the house of commons whether such attacks were "a breach of Herr Hitler's undertaking to President Roosevert that the German air force would not bomb civilians."

Butler said that the facts were "too well known" to require a statement.

All British merchant and fishing vessels in the North sea now are being armed against aircraft.

DESTROYED BY FIRE

URBANA, O.—(U.P.)—The office of the Crow Hybrid Seed Corn company was destroyed Sunday by a fire that started from a defective tin flue. The loss was estimated at $1200. Firemen saved company records by removing a safe.

HANGS SELF IN CELL

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Two hours after his arrest early today on charges of abusing his family, Robert Long, 39, was found hanged to death in his police station cell.

SPEED'S FINE IN SKIING BUT THE 'EXTRAS' IN SMOKING GO WITH SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS

It takes your breath away even to watch him. Down the steep side of the mountain...a perfect telemark turn...and there he goes...faster and faster. That's Bob Bourdon, former Vermont champion. On skis, he's one of New England's fastest. But in smoking, he's strictly on the slow side. Read what he says (at right).

In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

In the Cannon Mountain Aerial Tramway, Franconia Notch, N. H., Bob Bourdon (above) enjoys a slow-burning Camel. "No speed for me in my smoking," says this ski champion. "Camels are slower-burning and give me extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor."

"THE faster the going, the more fun in skiing," says Bob Bourdon. But he has a different angle on cigarettes. When Bob Bourdon says: "Slow burning is my guide to more mildness, more coolness, and more flavor," he's putting the stamp of actual smoking experience on the laboratory findings of science.

Fast burning in a cigarette means heat. Nothing dulls the delicate elements of cigarette flavor and aroma so surely as excess heat. There's little pleasure or comfort in a hot, flat smoke in which the flavor has been burned away. The extra mildness, refreshing coolness, and smooth, mellow flavor of Camels are confirmed by recent widely reported scientific tests, in which Camels burned slowest of the sixteen of the largest-selling brands tested! (See panel at left.)

SMOKERS: SAVE THE COST OF THE STATE CIGARETTE TAX

Smokers who live in communities where certain state cigarette taxes are in effect can save the cost of the tax—and, in some instances, more—through smoking Camels. (See panel at left.) When you are a Camel smoker, you get this unique economy—and all the extra enjoyment of cooler, milder smoking—the fragrance and delicate taste of finer, more costly tobaccos.

Hold District Tournament Drawings at Carey Today

TWO Richland county cage coaches, W. L. Miley of Bellville and John Rees of Lexington are in Carey today for the drawings of the District tournament opening at Carey high school Thursday.

Whether Bellville, Richland county league and tournament champion, and Lexington, the runner-up, who lost a 49 to 34 decision to the Bluejays in the finals of the county classic Saturday night, play Thursday or Friday will be decided from the drawings.

The Carey tourney, in which two teams from Richland, Crawford, Hancock, Seneca, Wyandot, as well as clubs from Ada, Bluffton, Carey, Fostoria, St. Wendlin and Calvert of Tiffin participate, gets under way at 7:30 p. m. Thursday with a three-game program.

Play will continue Friday at 7:30 p. m., Saturday at 7:30 p. m., and will wind up with programs on March 7, 8 and 9. The finals are set for 9 p. m. Saturday, March 9.

Becker, Marino Head Grapple Card Tonight

Vern Heiser, Mansfield Boy, Also to Appear on Mat Show at Armory.

TWO husky wrestlers hailing from New York City will wage a battle for mat supremacy far, far from Broadway tonight. In fact, the Armory will be the scene of this meeting of "hometown" boys as they wrestle the two out of three falls, 90 minute time limit main bout of the weekly mat card of the Quality club.

Georgie Becker, a favorite with Mansfield wrestling fans, and "Bull" Marino, husky Italian lad from the lower East Side, are the two and their meeting is certainly one of the oddities of an odd sport.

Although both are residents of New York City, they've never met on the wrestling pad and weren't even acquainted until they came to the middle-west seeking fame and fortune on the wrestling pad.

Now they find themselves the central figures in a strange battle for mat supremacy and they'll be in there battling each other none the less hard because of the fact that they both come from the same city.

Becker's hopes of getting back into the lightheavyweight championship picture rest pretty much on this match while Marino will be struggling to edge himself into that same coveted limelight.

Other features of tonight's mat card are the second appearance here of "The Hun," the black masked matman who flaunts a big German Nazi swastika on his robe and who is to meet Walter Achiu of Honolulu in the semi-final, and the second pro start of Vern Heiser, fine young Mansfield lad who is to meet Larry Munro of Cicero, Ill., in the opening event at 8:30 o'clock.

BOWLING SCORES

SOPHIA MEDER smashed out a spectacular 589 series to set the individual scoring pace for women at the Meder alleys last week end.

Bowling with the Meder Recreation women's team, she marked games of 170, 190, and 229. The women had to tally a nifty 1002 final game to win one decision from the Meder Recreation men's club. Mary McMullen and Thelma Linster followed Mrs. Meder with a 515 and 511, respectively.

R. Lutz collected a 617 to pace the men, who opened with a 1013. Mike Meder added a 603.

Bucks Tackle Indiana Five

By TOM SILER

COLUMBUS—(AP)—The Big Ten basketball spotlight shifts here where Ohio State's still-hopeful Buckeyes entertain Indiana in the key game on tonight's hardwood program.

The Bucks, who nosed out the Hoosiers for the title a year ago, can all but knock Indiana out of the picture with a victory. The same two teams meet again a week hence in Bloomington.

* * *

Purdue, the top quintet with eight triumphs in nine games, faces Iowa, an equally hopeful but less formidable aggregation. All of the contenders survived Saturday's schedule, sending the teams into the stretch run with three contests remaining and four aggregations still having a look-in at the crown.

Predictions on tonight's games with team records:

Indiana (7-2) at Ohio State (6-3): this figure to be the closest game of the night, but we'll string along with Indiana by four points.

Iowa (3-6) at Purdue (8-1): the Boilermakers figure to take this only by about 12 points

Illinois (6-3) at Chicago (1-8): The Maroons scare 'em but don't beat 'em, this season it seems. Hapac and Co., should win by eight points.

Northwestern (5-4) at Michigan (4-5): Another victory for the Wildcats inasmuch as the Wolverines apparently have cracked wide open.

* * *

Wisconsin (2-7) at Minnesota (3-6: Nothing at stake but this should be a close one. Our choice is Wisconsin by three points.

Sportsmen, Farmers to Meet At Park Pavilion Thursday

Conservation Question to Be Discussed at Meeting Scheduled for North Park.

IN ORDER that the citizens may have more opportunity of voicing their opinions on conservation questions, a meeting of sportsmen and farmers of the county will be held at the North lake pavilion at 7:30 p. m. Thursday, it was announced today. All sportsmen and farmers are urged to attend and it is expected that the attendance will be large as there has been general state-wide interest in the recently announced new program of the Ohio Division of Conservation and Natural Resources.

Not only will the new 15-point program announced by Conservation Commissioner Don Waters be explained but a county conservation committee will be formed and two representatives—one a farmer and the other a sportsman—will be named to represent Richland county on the district conservation committee.

Later, from each of the seven district committees two representatives will be selected, it is announced, to act as spokesmen from the district at public hearings conducted by the Conservation and Natural Resources commission and to attend, upon invitation, meetings of the commission, acting in an advisory capacity.

"We hope to be able to serve the people in a more efficient manner in this way," Mr. Waters stated recently in commenting upon this method of giving closer representation to the sportsmen and farmers of each county and in announcing the program adopted by the commission which provides for district field headquarters in each of the seven conservation districts of Ohio. "There is no effort on our part," he said, "to supplant regularly established sportsmen's and farm groups but rather to encourage them, as well as individuals, to participate in these county meetings."

Establishment of headquarters in the seven districts, the Conservation and Natural Resources commission feels, will develop a closer contact with local conservation programs, eliminate travel and expense of persons who heretofore have been compelled to travel to the central offices in Columbus, as well as co-ordinate all of the activities of the division, under the direction of a district supervisor.

District conservation officers, already employed by the division, will be placed in charge of these offices as soon as they are established and all game management, fish management, law enforcement and other activities will be carried on from these offices.

* * *

Conservation Officer C. F. Blakeman, who will serve as district supervisor in District No. 2, of which Richland county is a part, will call the meeting to order, turning it over to officers to be selected by those attending the meeting. Representatives of the Ohio Division of Conservation and Natural Resources will be present to fully explain the plan and to aid in every way possible.

RESUME INDOOR TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS TODAY

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— The National Indoor Tennis championships resumed today after a one-day recession.

Bobby Riggs of Chicago, the nation's top-ranking amateur and seeded No. 1, headed the men's contingent along with Don McNeill of Kenyon college, No. 2 seeded player who made a belated start with a 6-0, 6-1 victory over Les Hirschfield of New York on Saturday. Two hours later he defeated William Pardoe of New York, 6-1, 6-4.

Scots Need One Win To Cop League Title

Cage Fans to See All-Star Attraction

Rens' Game With Chuckovits' Team Expected To Draw Record Crowd Thursday.

THURSDAY night's all-star basketball program at Mansfield high school is expected to attract one of the largest crowds to pack the Tyger lair this season.

The feature game on the card, sponsored by the City Class A league, will pit the New York Renaissance club, world's pro champions, against Chuck Chuckovits' Collegians of Toledo.

Their meeting should develop into one of the best all-pro games ever witnessed on a Mansfield court.

Neither team needs an introduction to Mansfield fans. The Rens appeared at the Tyger lair earlier this season against the City league All-Stars and won without exertion.

A request by fans that the Rens be matched against a strong pro team resulted in the signing of the Toledo club.

The Toledoans, paced by Chuckovits, won over the Mansfield All-Stars by a one-sided score late last season. Chuckovits, holder of the Ohio collegiate scoring record, tallied 29 points in his first appearance here.

The preliminary game on Thursday's card will bring together the Westinghouse teams of the Mansfield and Lima plants. The Lima quintet whipped Coach Hank Richard's men in their first meeting recently, and the Mansfield club expects to even the count on the home court.

* * *

City league officials announced today that the admission for the attraction will be 40 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

'Clipper' Smith Decides To Remain at Villanova

LOS ANGELES—(INS)—What to do about Maurice "Clipper" Smith, who decided to remain as head football coach at Villanova instead of fulfilling a verbal agreement to take a similar job at Loyola, was to be taken up by the local school's board of athletic control at a meeting tonight. "We still regard him as our coach!" was the declaration by Father Lorenzo Malone. It was understood that Loyola was to have paid Smith $10,000 a year.

Wooster Cagers Can Annex State-Wide Honors With Victory Over Oberlin Thursday.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—L. C. Boles, director of athletics at the College of Wooster, doesn't believe in championships in college football, basketball and baseball, but he's about to have a couple forced upon him.

A year ago, when the Ohio conference considered a proposal to select champions in the three sports, Director Boles led the fight to kill the amendment. His ideas carry weight in the 20-college circuit, and the plan was shelved.

And now, for the second straight year his Scots, coached by "Mose" Hole, have the best record in the basketball campaign, and need only one win in their next two games to clinch the league laurels and the state-wide honors.

Last week the Scots won their 37th consecutive Ohio league game, their 12th this year. Muskingum, nearest foe for the league honors, dropped a 58-51 verdict to Case Saturday, after 10 wins in a row. The Scots and Muskies meet next Saturday at Wooster in the grand finale, but the contest won't mean a thing if the Scots beat Oberlin Thursday, for everything will go to Wooster on percentage. Ohio U., second in the state-wide list, can't catch the Scots if they win one of the remaining pair.

Muskingum's Jan. 23 game with weak Baldwin-Wallace was cancelled, cutting the Muskies one game under the total played by Wooster and eliminating the New Concord crew from a chance to tie for the laurels by beating the Scots.

This week's games:

Monday: Indiana at Ohio State, Dayton at Toledo, John Carroll at Kent State, Muskingum at Otterbein, Bluffton at Defiance.

Tuesday: Kenyon at Heidelberg, Findlay at Bowling Green, Kent State at Hiram, Ohio Wesleyan at Dayton, Ironton at Rio Grande, De Sales at Lawrence Tech.

Wednesday: Baldwin Wallace at Mount Union, Cincinnati at Miami, Defiance at Detroit Tech, Youngstown at Geneva, Bluffton at Tri-State.

Saturday: Michigan at Ohio State, Toledo at Detroit, Kent State at Baldwin Wallace, Muskingum at Wooster, Case at Western Reserve, Ohio U. at Washington and Jefferson, Giffin at Concordia.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Town Tattler: A little bird says: Don't be too completely flabbergasted if Henry Armstrong and Ceferino Garcia come up with a draw on the coast Friday night. . . . Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, is convulsing Miami audiences with his demonstrations of how El Bonura covers first.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR. Dave Bloom, Memphis commercial appeals: "Four new umpires will be on the Southern Association staff this season. . . . The newcomers have an easy job ahead if surpassing the work of the departed brothers is the sole requirement."

* * *

Personals: Eddie Duchin won't book his band for the summer until he's had a chance to study the Red Sox schedule—he's that rabid. . . . Most exciting news from Clearwater is that our old pal, Van Lingle Mungo, swallowed a cud of chewing tobacco.

Everybody was in a dither except Mungo who, like the rest of us rebels, can take a drink of water with a chew in his mouth. . . . Red Lucas, the old Pirates' hurler, is among baseball's unemployed and none of his friends can understand why. He still can pitch Class A ball and coach young slabbists.

WEEK'S BEST CRACK. Mr. Sam Mirsky, who lost a candy store decision to Al Davis (and who is suing Al for $50,000) was at the ringside Friday night when Davis got his lumps from Lou Ambers. . . . After it was all over, Mr. Mirsky said: "I demand a return bout."

VITT PREDICTS TROUBLE FOR NEW YORK YANKEES

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Manager Oscar Vitt wouldn't predict a pennant today for his Cleveland Indians but he was "happier about the club's chances" than at any time since he took over the reins of the tribe.

"The Yankees aren't going to have any picnic this year," he asserted. "Several clubs will give them trouble, and we'll be one of them."

WINS CRAWFORD TITLE.

BUCYRUS—Chatfield walloped Mt Zion, 51 to 18, in the finals Saturday night to win the Crawford county Class B basketball tournament championship. Chatfield will participate in the District tourney which gets under way at Carey high school Thursday night.

DAYTON —(AP)— The Dunbill Clothiers team of Dayton, rolled out a score of 3,039 last night to win the five-man team champion-

LOS ANGELES—(U.P.)—Larry McPhail, general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers and baseball's outstanding pioneer, plans to abandon travel by train this season and fly his team to all of its out of town engagements.

The red-headed Irishman who brought night baseball to the big leagues already has opened negotiations with TWA concerning the rental of a ship or ships for the exclusive use of the Dodgers.

According to TWA officials an entire baseball team could be flown in one of the 33-passenger four-motored Boeing stratoliners which the company will use in inaugurating high altitude flying early in June. Until the ship is put into operation the Dodgers could be accommodated in two Douglas sleeper planes.

The use of planes by athletic units is not an entirely new thing. TWA leased three planes to Sonja Henie for the transcontinental tour of her ice follies two years ago, flew the Detroit Red Wings hockey team to New York the same year, and last year flew the Pittsburgh Panthers football team to Seattle for the opening game of the season.

McPhail, while no one to overlook the publicity that would go with a flying baseball team, is not primarily interested in plane travel for that reason. His view is that if all major league clubs started flying the playing schedules would be considerably tightened with a resultant increase in income. He also believes that it would be cheaper, what with a decrease in hotel bills. Too, he thinks a great deal of player fatigue would be avoided.

Tightening the major league schedule has long been a matter of interest to McPhail. He realizes that the long season is necessary under the present conditions in order that the owners may get in enough games to show a profit. But now he sees air travel as the means of getting in just as many games without having the season open in the cold and wet of early April and not close until the cold and unsettled weather of late September and early October.

If the Dodgers take to the air, and the experiment is a success, it is certain to re-open an issue which is of keenest interest in this section of the country. I mean a major league team here in Los Angeles or San Francisco.

Traveling through the sky, a major league team can come from the east to the west more quickly than it can travel by train from New York to Chicago . . . New York to St. Louis. Plans are now underway for an exhibition game here on July 9 or 10 with the Dodgers flying out (they have open dates on those days) to play an all-star team from the Hollywood and Los Angeles clubs.

Gover Favored In Tournament

In the role of a favorite, Beauford Glover, Mansfield lightweight, a member of the Cleveland Golden Gloves tournament team, will receive his initial test in the Chicago Tribune Golden Gloves classic tonight.

Glover, who was trained by Buss Dochia at the Friendly House, is one of the four members of the Cleveland squad to see action tonight.

They are Buddy Smallwood, Akron flyweight, Benny Calla, 118, and Max Schindler, Sandusky featherweight. The four other classes will battle Tuesday night.

Why, asks an editorial, aren't the Irish in this war? Perhaps one reason, answers the man at the next desk, is that they aren't using brick bats and shillalahs for weapons.

SHARES HELD TO IRREGULAR COURSE TODAY

United Aircraft, Montgomery Ward on Downside: Commodities Work Higher.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Shares held to a narrowly irregular course in today's market.

On the downside were U. S. Steel, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, Western Union, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Eastman and Union Carbide. Resistant were Loft, General Electric, U. S. Rubber, Standard Oil of N. J. and Santa Fe.

Bonds were steady. Commodities worked a bit higher. Foreign bourses showed strength in spots and their undertone was a bit firmer than has been usual recently.

The state of steel production was a focal point of Wall street observation because of the leveling-off prices in the declining rate of manufacture. The magazine Steel said: "Signs are appearing of a check to the recent sharp recession in steel market activity."

Also on the optimistic side was the report that chemical manufacturing industries were continuing close to the late 1939 levels of activity.

WIN PRIZES IN CORN CONTEST

Richland Farmers Take First, Second Awards at Marion.

Two Richland county farmers won first and second prizes in the Pfister Hybrid corn show at Marion recently.

Competing with farmers from nine counties, E. C. Renner of Bloominggrove township won first prize of $10 with an exhibit of 10 ears of Pfister's 260 hybrid corn and took the grand championship ribbon for Ohio and Michigan.

Renner's exhibit scored 99½ per cent and yielded 120 bushels of shelled corn per acre in a test on his farm.

The second prize of $5 in the district was won by S. H. Widders of Weller township who displayed 10 ears of Pfister's 266 corn.

Renner will enter his display in a national contest.

At the Theaters

HERE'S real production news—Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert who co-starred in one of the greatest comedies, "It Happened One Night," and Spencer Tracy and Hedy LaMarr, who are together in "I Take This Woman" will all be together in one big star-studded cast when "Boom Town" is made by M-G-M. It will be a story of the Texas oil fields and the towns that sprung up around the "black gold" . . . And "Boys Town" will have a sequel, again starring Tracy and Mickey Rooney. The first picture won Tracy the Academy Award . . . In "Waterloo Bridge" Vivien Leigh will have the toughest job an actress could face, for she will have to live up to her Scarlett O'Hara role or disappoint her fans . .

Speculate On "Gone."

There has been considerable speculation as to whether "Gone With the Wind" would be cut when it is released for general showing at regular movie prices. It is almost certain to be cut at least a third or possibly a half, to bring it within a two hour running period. But it will not be shown on a regular movie schedule until sometime in 1941. The big, four-hour spectable-drama is at the Madison through Thursday.

From Awnings to Movies.

Kent Taylor, who plays the "other man" in "I Take This Woman," starring Hedy LaMarr and Spencer Tracy, was an awning salesman before he got a break in the movies. In fact he was putting up awnings at the home of a star when his clean-cut good looks attracted attention. He plays the man for whom Hedy is ready to die in the triangular story. It is an Ohio attraction through tomorrow.

Murder On the Side.

"There's Always a Woman" gives Joan Blondell and Melvyn Douglas to romp through a gay comedy with a dash of murder on the side. They're both detectives and work together smoothly until he starts on the trail of a murder and she represents the accused. The colorful story, suggested by Rudyard Kipling's well-known poem, "Gunga Din," is the second feature at the Majestic for the middle of the week, starting tomorrow.

Historical Drama.

Showing at the Ritz theater Tuesday are "Heaven With a Barbed Wire Fence," a romance of the road, and "Drums Along the Mohawk," the technicolor historical hit. The latter picture stars Henry Fonda and Claudette Colbert. The story is of the stirring days of adventure and romance when America was young. It depicts the colonists under the onslaught of the savage Indians.

Karloff As Sleuth.

"Fatal Hour," starring Boris Karloff is showing at the Park theater Tuesday. There are four murders in the picture and Karloff plays the role of the Chinese sleuth who follows the crooked trail of smugglers, gangsters and jewel thieves until he lands right at their back door. The second feature is "Beware of Spooks," starring Joe E. Brown and Mary Carlisle. Joe is seen as a patrolman whose antics make him the underworld's best, if most unwilling friend.

G. O. P. Support for Farm Parity Fund Sets Off Scrap

M'NARY BACKS PLAN, BARKLEY SEES IT FAIL

Senate Leader Declares New Taxes Would Be Needed If Program's Approved.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Potential Republican support for a $?,000,000 farm parity fund injected fresh controversy today into senate study of the agriculture appropriation bill, center of the current economy battle.

Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican leader said he was inclined to favor the plan which is sponsored by a group of farm state Democrats. If the Republicans vote for it, he asserted senate approval would be assured.

Democratic Leader Barkley on the other hand, told reporters that it was highly doubtful whether the senate would authorize parity payments, an issue which the house did not consider.

Such an appropriation, Barkley declared, would necessitate either additional taxes or an increase in the $45,000,000,000 national debt limitation.

Parity payments, for which congress voted $225,000,000 last year, the designed to give farmers the same purchasing power which they had in the 1910-14 period. They are in addition to soil conservation benefits.

Although President Roosevelt did not provide for parity funds in his budget, several senators have predicted that he would approve their inclusion by congress.

See Other Savings.

Parity advocates contend that even if the fund is approved, economy forces still could reduce federal spending by slashing army and navy appropriations.

Simultaneously, a suggestion for balancing the budget came from the national economy league, which declared this could be done by cutting $1,745,000,000 from the president's proposals for relief, public works and the farm program.

After a slack period, both branches of congress were settling down this week to a heavier schedule in the hope of adjourning a few weeks before the Republican National convention, which opens June 24.

The senate finance committee lost no time in considering the house-approved bill to extend the reciprocal trade program for three years. It called Secretary Hull to renew the administration arguments in favor of the measure.

The senate and house tickered routine appropriations bills for debate this afternoon. The house will consider tomorrow the senate measure to increase capital of the export-import bank from $100,000,000,000 to $200,000,000. The increase would make possible an additional loan to Finland.

Up and Down THE STREET

Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger discovered this morning that he wasn't as good a sprinter as some of the youngsters he sought to capture. It's just as well for the youngsters, because they probably would have been taken to juvenile court. Firemen were called to Daisy street and Chester avenue at 8:55 a. m. today—the second time almost to the minute within the past four days—on a false alarm. Someone pointed out the boys believed to have turned in the call and Seeburger started after them but gave up after a short sprint when they disappeared across the back lots.

A Mansfielder whose car was stolen from in front of his home the other night at least had a friendly warning from the thief before the car was taken. The owner told police that his car had been used without his consent two nights before it was missing and both times it was returned almost to the same spot where he left it. The thief forgot to be so accommodating the third night, however, and the next morning the machine wasn't there. It was found yesterday in Marion, apparently unharmed.

An act of courtesy was answered with discourtesy today and a Good Samaritan vowed he'd never play that role again. He helped a Walnut street produce dealer push his truck from the ice-coated street gutter, got a shower of snow and ice from the truck's wheels as they spun on the slippery ice and not even a sign of thanks for his help. The produce dealer merely shouted to his delivery boy, who was at the wheel, to go on, and then walked away, leaving his helper brushing slush from his coat.

Pershing Says Surrender Terms In '18 Would Have Kept Peace

(By Associated Press)

TUCSON, Ariz.—Gen. John J. Pershing believes that had the allied powers heeded his recommendation for Germany's unconditional surrender in 1918, Europe would be at peace today.

In an interview at his lodge on the edge of the desert, the 79-year-old general declared events since the World war armistice had justified his unflinching stand at the time.

General Pershing sent a document to the allied supreme war council on Oct. 30, 1918, setting forth the reasons why he believed an armistice was then ill-advised.

In it he asserted that by "accepting the principle of a negotiated peace rather than a dictated peace the allies would jeopardize the moral position they now hold and possibly lose the chance actually to secure world peace on terms that would insure permanence."

Although he counselled forcing Germany to lay down arms unconditionally, the American World war commander said if an armistice was granted "the terms should be so rigid that under no circumstances could Germany take up arms."

In reality, he added, the armistice permitted the Germans to march back "with colors flying and bands playing, and posing as "victims of political conditions."

General Pershing's comments on the inter-allied negotiations preceding the Armistice was prompted by yesterday's disclosures from the second volume of papers of Robert Lansing, secretary of state during the World war.

MAPS PROGRAM TO FIGHT FOR PENSION PLAN

Relates He's Forced to Enter Political Race to Campaign for $50 Monthly Proposal.

(By United Press)

DAYTON—Herbert S. Bigelow, Cincinnati city councilman who sponsored a $50-a-month old age pension plan that was defeated by Ohio voters last fall, said today that he would be a candidate either for governor or congressman-at-large in order to further his pension idea this year.

At a meeting of Dayton supporters of his pension plan Sunday, Bigelow said he was confronted "by a situation which I think amounts to a serious infraction of the civil liberties guaranteed to us by our bill of rights."

He said "several radio companies in Cincinnati" had notified him they would deny him speaking time to discuss his plan unless he were a candidate for public office.

"I must either become a candidate for a state office or abandon my effort to have another vote on the Bigelow pension plan," he said, "for what chance would there be with the radios closed to us and with the newspapers all against us."

Bigelow said he would run on the Democratic ticket.

He said that a friend whose name he could not reveal might announce his candidacy for governor within a week. He said this friend was sympathetic to his pension plan.

Gets Petitions Ready.

"In case there should be, as I hope, this eleventh hour entry into the race for governor, I expect to have petitions ready to file for congressman-at-large," he said.

Bigelow said his campaign would be confined to the issue of his pension proposal and to one to abolish unemployment by issuing currency against "our idle gold" in order to lend up to $5000 to workers at small interest to build homes.

"Ten billions so spent would build homes for two million families who cannot now afford homes, and would yield the government an annual revenue of $300,000,000 without one dollar of debt or taxes," he said.

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Here Lies—

George Washington's birthday is usually selected by school teachers and other purveyors of legend as the proper day for running down the lie, or common falsehood, by instructing the young that the telling of untruths was not only frowned upon by the Father of Our Country but will get you nowhere, anyway.

On Broadway the attitude is different, for it is well known from Lindy's to El Morocco that a swift lie is not only a respected necessity but often a commercial asset.

There are those around Times Square who are eating caviar spread very thick these evenings who would be eating beans if they had adhered strictly to the truth, and there are names in lighted letters two feet high on the marquees which would be just single lines in the telephone directory under absolutely veracious circumstances. And as one of the regulars was noting the other midnight in the Stork club, this town, as well as history, has been perpetrated a number of colorful falsehoods which did no one any harm, except possibly the wincing ghost of G. Washington, if he is still around.

Of course the most consistent lie heard in the midnight taverns is the phrase: "I thought of that line first," uttered by the wits like Milton Berle and Lou Holtz and Joe E. Lewis, to say nothing of the non-floor show types like James Cannon and "Bugs" Baer.

These lads are as jealous and possessive of a gag as a mother of her child, and as positive of its parentage.

Lies told by newspapermen in the friendly exchange of adventure stories are something for the memoirs of a Munchausen, and lies tossed off by actors in quest of a job are on a par with the propaganda filed by a warring nation.

* * *

Margaret Lindsay, who was just another pretty girl from the Middle-West, took a quick trip to London, acquired an English accent, returned to America a "well known British actress," and nabbed a part in the all-English cast of "Cavalcade." It was months before Hollywood discovered she was as American as an ice cream soda.

Eddie Cantor won his Ida (and all those gags!) by posing as a manager of a Coney Island restaurant, when actually he was a singing waiter.

Sir Guy Standing was hired by Paramount because he came around in elegant attire and told them he was a general in the British army.

* * *

One of the all-time liars of all time was Harry Gerguson, whose name never would have seen headlines (and who would, himself, never have seen the inside of the gilded Bistros) had he not pinned an orchid on his lapel, declared himself to be Prince Michael Romanoff and allowed himself to be entertained by the most monied people.

Mike's most engaging lie, I think, was the one which caused the president of Harvard to be convinced this wordy little man was a Romanoff, and gave Mike a scholarship to Harvard—in cash!

* * *

P. T. Barnum made millions telling lies about midgets and mermaids . . . Benay Venuta got her first jobs on the strength of her roommate's clippings. Benay just explained to producers that she got the rave notices when she was using another name. . . . Sigrid Gurie acquired an aura of romance by posing as one of the "my eengleesh-ees-no-vary-good" foreign stars—and it took years for the public to catch up to the fact that she came from Brooklyn.

* * *

It was Jerry Lewis, the magazine writer, who recalled that Al Schacht is the only ball player in history who ever scouted himself into the big leagues. And he did it with a fine series of lies. Al was pitching for the Jersey City team, but longing for the more elite diamonds, and so it happened that after every game he pitched, newspaper clippings of the event would be mailed to Clark Griffiths, owner of the Washing Senators, accompanied by a fan letter from one "Jack Redding" saying what a great game this fellow Al Schacht had played. Griffiths, impressed at length, signed Al.

And had not Al one day carelessly left a sample of his handwriting lying around, it might never have been discovered that the fervent fan, Mr. Jack Redding, was that great pitcher, Al Schacht.

Erskine Hawkins was a rising young drummer when he tried to get a job in a band that didn't need a drummer, but could use a trumpeter. So he told them he could play a trumpet, and within two weeks he learned how. Now he's one of the most famous, and one of the best.

When Rosalind Russell tried to get a job in New York the producer asked her "What have you played in?" and Rosalind, who had played in nothing at all, rattled off a list of parts which would have staggered the biographer of the late Mrs. Fiske.

When she had finished reciting her triumphs, the producer grinned: "I know you're lying, but you fake too well to let you go" and hired her.

FAIR ENOUGH

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—There is no telling how far the Rev. Fr. Charles Coughlin may go, so, just to play safe, I am going to dig up my credentials as a bishop of some church in Colorado, the name of which escapes me at the moment, and protect my interests.

I am just anticipating the day when it is established that everyone in this country must go to one church or another under the Coughlin system of government.

When people must go to church or go to jail, a great mass of citizens who are now non-churchgoers will be in the market for a nice, convenient church connection, and that is where my bishop's license will come in handy. In order to prove that they belong to a church and go to it, people will have to possess church cards, and they will have to get them punched like a meal ticket or get a stamp every Sunday and possibly once or twice during the week.

I am not bothering my head about what Father Coughlin thinks would be a fair initiation fee into a legal American church or what he has in mind as weekly dues or assessments, but I will guarantee this: I will guarantee that nobody will undercut me, because I aim to have me a great big plant, short services and a system of fees, dues and assessments so small that they will defy competition.

In California, the Ham-'n'-Eggs racket was a great success on a penny a day, but I am no pig for money, and I probably will be able to get the collection down to a penny a week in my place, and still do very well for Bishop Pegler by running a fast grind.

My services will be only about three or four minutes, just long enough for my congregation to get their church cards punched or stamped, so that they can't be picked up by the Brown Shirts during the ensuing week and tossed into a concentration camp as atheists.

"In and out, fast and no waiting, and please don't block the isles," will be the plan of my church, and they won't have to wait for my sermon, because I will have them printed on dodgers and hung up on a spike at the door, and each customer can grab one as he goes out.

They will be very good, sanitary sermons, too—all about the money changers and international bankers and the value of gold—and nobody is ever going to stick me for heresy under the Coughlin system of government and compulsory religion, because I am going to plagiarize Father Coughlin's own stuff, and nobody ever will be able to prove what it means, if anything.

Under this system of government, as I foresee it, we will have, in a manner of speaking, a religious closed shop, and those who refuse to consider this seriously seem to me to be taking an awful chance.

I say that because we now have a law which compels a man to join a labor union and pay initiation fees, dues and assessments whether he wants to or not, and under this system the unions sometimes pledge themselves to propositions involving religious and political principles which brutally violate the principles of some of the members.

Therefore, I foresee that we might easily come to adopt a sort of religious Wagner act, whereby all Americans must belong to some church and pay whatever fees, dues and so forth that church demands of its members, failing which they would be expelled and thus would become atheists, subject to imprisonment or worse.

British Uneasy as They Hear of Leaks In Blockade

FIGURES SHOW U.S. EXPORTS ON INCREASE

Those to Allies Rise 10 Per Cent While Neutral Trade Jumps 47 Per Cent.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Fear that war supplies are flowing to Germany through gaps in the British blockade prompted a series of uneasy questions for the government in the house of commons today.

One source of concern was figures showing that exports from the United States to Great Britain and France rose only 10 per cent in the last four months of 1939 over the like period in 1938, while they increased 47 per cent in European neutrals.

Ronald Cross, minister of economic warfare, who told the house last month the contraband control net was being "drawn very tightly," was asked to what extent concessions letting neutrals import more than their own requirements was dulling the edge of the blockade.

At the same time, informed sources said, Britain was about to complete a trade agreement with Norway—despite the still-unsettled issue over the Altmark case—and that the accord might include substantial concessions for Norwegian ships under contraband control.

These sources said the understanding might cover an arrangement permitting "navicerted" Norwegian cargoes—those given a "passport" by British blockade officials before sailing—to complete their voyages without calling at contraband control bases.

In Berlin yesterday, the German high command reported that counterblockade activity of German naval and air forces had sunk 496 Allied and neutral ships totaling 1,810,315 tons and carrying contraband for Britain in the five months up to Feb. 20. (An Associated Press tabulation Saturday recorded only 425 ships of all nations, including warships, totaling 1,439,807 tons, sunk since the war began.)

It was announced that Oslo had replied to sharp British questioning, defending Norway's action in dealing with the German prison ship Altmark from which the British rescued 299 captain merchant seamen in Norwegian territorial waters Feb. 16.

Britain, on the other hand, charged that in letting German ships traverse her waters to escape the blockade, Norway was taking an "unneutral" position.

Opened today for the first time, the cafeteria at the new Johnny Appleseed junior high school served 500 pupils in an hour and 20 minutes at noon, Principal Glenn G. Rohleder said. There are only 640 pupils in the school.

Mrs. Frances Hypes, manager of the cafeteria, said serving time would be speeded up to an hour as the workers become more accustomed to the set-up and the rest of the dishes are ready for use.

Five women and 20 school children will be employed in the restaurant, Mrs. Hypes said.

The cafeteria at the new John Simpson school, also under Mrs. Hypes' supervision, is expected to be ready for service by the end of the week.

QUIET PREVAILS IN CHURCH FUSS

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Quiet prevailed over the week-end in Holy Redeemer Catholic parish where a near riot a week ago by approximately 2,000 protesting parishioners prevented installation of Rev. Vincent Caruso, pastor-designate, and brought church members under an ecclesiastical interdict imposed by Archbishop Joseph Schrembs.

No effort was made yesterday to open the church in the East Side Italian neighborhood, or install the new pastor. Parishioners worshiped in their homes.

The archbishop's decree stipulated all members of the parish over 14 years of age must pledge in writing "unqualified submission" to civil and ecclesiastical authority before they may receive sacraments of the church.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1940.

To keep the record clear, it was "Sumner," not "Orson" Welles — and he was sent on a peace mission to Europe, not Mars.

The way money is being wasted for special primaries and election of short-term congressman in this district you might think it was a New Deal idea.

'Clean-Ups' Lack Permanency

DEFEAT of the Long machine in Louisiana is being hailed over the country as a triumph for "clean politics," the overthrow of demagogy, political corruption, and so on—but it may be well to await further developments before becoming too optimistic over what seems, at the moment, to be a considerable accomplishment.

Such conditions as have existed in Louisiana during the 12-year reign of Huey Long and his successors do not lend themselves readily to the "clean-up" process, nor do they stay cleaned up except by constant vigilance on the part of an alert majority of the electorate.

Crookedness and chicanery have fitted so closely into the political scheme of things in Louisiana and its cities, and in a number of other states and their cities, that it is too much to hope that these elements can be abruptly eliminated and that dependable honesty and capability will be suddenly injected into the handling of public business.

It will be noted that Louisiana's defeat of the Long machine was brought about by the rural vote, rather than by big city voters, and that this influence will carry on into determination of future policies, just as a united minority is often more effective than a lethargic majority.

While Huey Long may have been more brazen in his usurpation of power and in the venality of his conduct of affairs of state, the conclusion cannot be escaped that democracy will continue to fall far short of its possible accomplishments until more dependable honesty, capability and sincerity can be developed in a larger percentage of public employes entrusted with operation of national, state and local government and with expenditure of public money.

Social Equality Attained

WITHIN the bonds of their slavery to a ruthless dictator, the Russian people seem to have a sort of freedom. They have nothing to say about their government, but they have more social equality than some democracies.

An American professor of political science, while warning Americans not to travel on Soviet ships if they want comfort, gives these interesting details. The crews are on a social level not only with each other but with the passengers. Oilers and deck hands, when off duty, mingle freely with occupants of the first-class cabins.

"Passengers stand in line at the ship's barber shops with the crew," he says, and adds this surprising statement: "No matter what kind of work the Soviet sailor does, he appears to insist on a neat haircut, a close daily shave, perfumed hair and a careful manicure."

Such conduct may be mere pose or bravado. But anyway it shows an incredible change from the old days, when Russian sailors were bearded, unshorn and greasy and their vessels were notorious for their filthy condition. Details may be found in Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast."

A Message That Has Lived

A NEWLY written biography of Elbert Hubbard, "genius of Roycroft," by David Arnold Balch, serves as a reminder to the present generation of youth that they should not neglect learning something about this unique character in the American life of several decades ago.

Interest in Hubbard's most famous short literary production, "A Message to Garcia," was revived within the past week by local distribution of a number of copies of the "message" in booklet form, on the occasion of the forty-first anniversary of the date on which it was written.

"A Message to Garcia" is based on an incident of the Spanish-American war which was recently brought to mind by belated recognition of the service rendered by Col. Andrew S. Rowan in overcoming difficulties involved in carrying a message from President McKinley to General Garcia in the mountain fastnesses of Cuba.

In the various forms in which it was printed, after original publication in the Philistine, Hubbard's personal magazine, it is estimated that "A Message to Garcia" attained distribution of more than forty million copies—probably more than ever reached by a literary venture during the lifetime of its author.

Some of today's young people admit never having heard of "A Message to Garcia." That is too bad. They should all have an opportunity to read it, and also to learn something about Elbert Hubbard, who went down with the Lusitania when it was torpedoed by a German submarine May 7, 1915, with loss of 1,150 lives.

Japan's War Machine Stalled

THE MILLS of the gods go on grinding, and the grist is often finer than fallible mortals expect. Japan is a case in point. Her brutal and destructive campaign in China is stalled. Her army is not going farther, for the present at least, because it can't—for lack of war materials.

The war-makers can't get the materials at home, because money and productive power are exhausted. In particular, they can't get coal for their industries.

Lacking money to buy what they need from the United States, and with Uncle Sam in position to shut off essential supplies, the empire-builders at Tokyo seem stalled.

The Asiatic peril is not yet past. Sooner or later another wave of ruthless conquest may roll out from Japan. But for the present, at least, some general laws seem to be operating visibly in that area.

Truth In the Trenches

AT LAST it is possible to see something good in war. Nobody would want to press this point too far, but it does set a fellow to thinking.

"In the front lines," writes a correspondent from the Finnish front, "and this is true of any army and any country, you get none of the wild statements and bitter generalizations that you hear bars boys among civilians. If you ask whether the enemy troops are good, you get a thoughtful, honest answer. Here they get out of the habit of lying to others or themselves.

"You cannot lie to yourself in the front lines about anything you like long. Separated by only the walls of paper sandbags, truth becomes a habit."

Advisers Betting Roosevelt Will Run for Third Term

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I forget the exact nature of the occasion, but late one night in one of the hotels the highly-paid entertainers of the theatrical and musical worlds began to congregate, and before things had gone very far the m.c. was dragging all the stars of the stage and the screen out on the floor and each was making a speech or doing pantomime, or doing whatever their specialties happened to be.

It was one of those unprogrammed, unscheduled, unanticipated windfalls that happen every now and then on Broadway, and I can remember being rather surprised when somebody yelled to a man in the booth, "Throw that spot over to the left . . . put it on that man over there."

By the time the spot reached this man the m.c. had him by the arm, and it turned out to be Harold G. Hoffman, who had once been the youngest captain in the U. S. Army and was a former governor of New Jersey.

THE ex-governor, having no say in the matter, walked out into the middle of the floor and proceeded to give one of the wittiest and funniest talks the crowd had ever heard. Although he was preceded and followed by stars whose salaries run into five figures, people who are highly paid because of their wit and their charm, Hoffman walked off with the whole show.

Probably it is because of this ability and also because he is president of Saints and Sinners, and because he knows practically everyone on this side of the river, that Hoffman is almost as well known on Broadway as he is the political wards of Jersey.

He makes no bones about his ambition to become governor of New Jersey again. His career ran into an unfortunate ramification of the Lindbergh-Hauptmann kidnapping case several years back, and because of this he came up with what the boys on the city desk call a "bad press." It was a sorry turn for a man who only a few years before was widely referred to as "presidential timber."

WELL, Hoffman is 44 now, after 23 years in politics, and he has never been defeated at the polls. He is a liberal and his political enemies, even in his own party, sometimes make references to what they call the "Hague-Hoffman alliance." His answer to this on at least one public occasion was, "My relations with Hague are the same as they are with Haig & Haig. I can take either or let them alone."

IN A way he is something like Mayor LaGuardia in that he says what he thinks, irrespective of party. For instance, if Roosevelt does something he likes, he says so. Conversely, Republicans get the bird when he does not approve of their policies.

What the political future holds for this husky, quick-witted young father of three daughters I wouldn't know. But I can tell you this: if he ever wants a job he can move over to Broadway and make bums out of half the stars who are the elite on a street that, justly or not, is the most famous in the world.

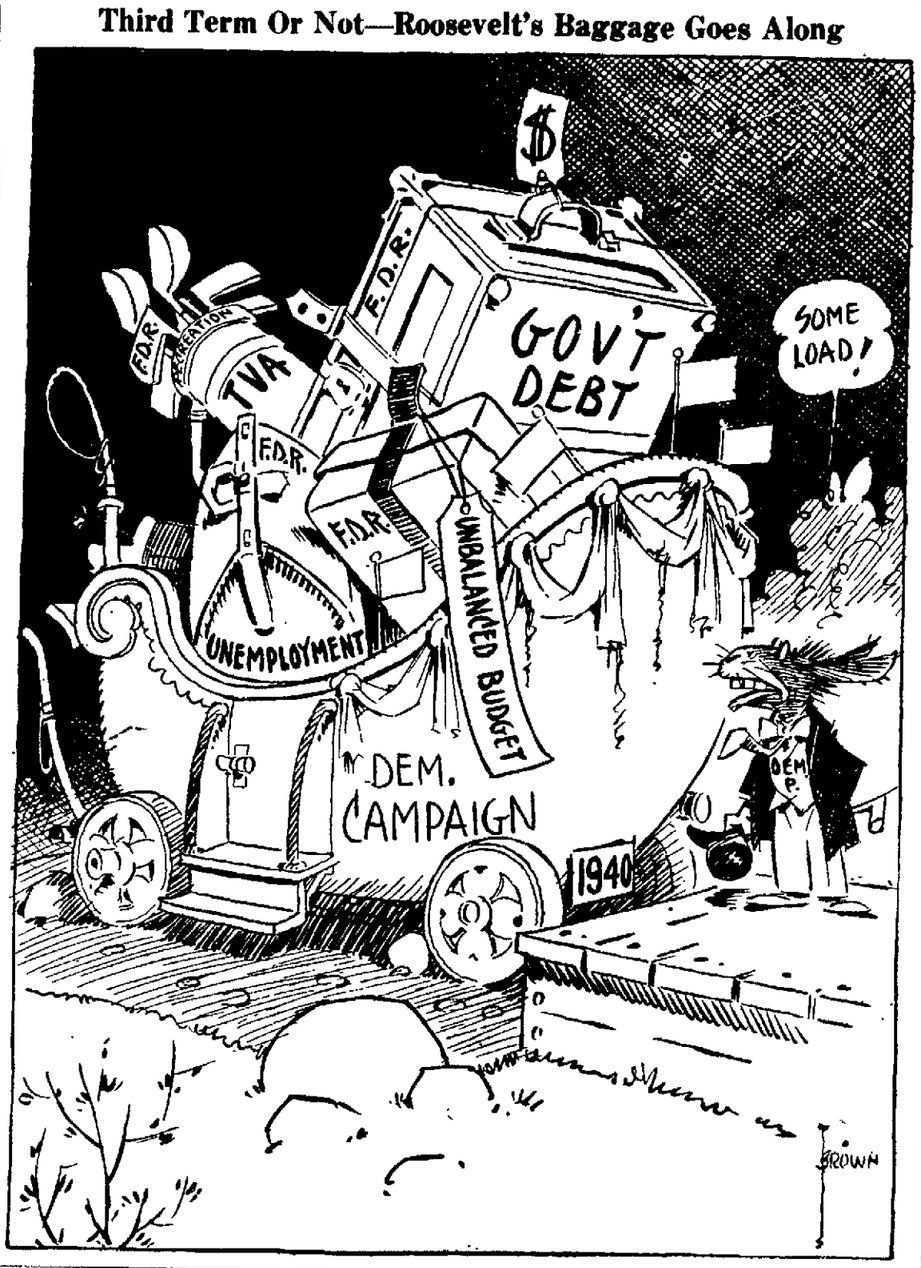
Third Term Or Not—Roosevelt's Baggage Goes Along



Listen, World!

I Can Keep the Faith!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

HERE'S a letter. No, you didn't write it. But you're going to wonder, with a start, if someone hasn't been reading your secret thoughts.

As a matter of fact, they're the secret thoughts of thousands of sensitive, discouraged people during these chaotic days—people who are wondering if it's worth while to fight any longer, hope any longer . . . if it wouldn't be more sensible to run away.

The writer's a man—49 years old—owns a small store. He has never been wealthy, yet has managed to make a comfortable home for his wife and three children, and even keep going through the depression. Now two of the children are married, the third in business for himself.

The wife is absorbed in club work and has a small but sufficient income of her own. She and the man had little in common for years. He has no debts nor obligations—has saved a few thousands. And he wants to run away!

"No—there's no other woman," he writes. "Nor any scandal that I'm trying to escape. I'm simply fed up with everything. I'm not a brainy fellow. I just plugged along and always took it for granted that things were going to turn out right. But lately, somehow, I have lost my grip. Everywhere you look, it is like a mad house. Everything going round in dizzy circles. I feel like that fellow in Robert Service's poem — the one called "I'M SCARED OF IT ALL."

"I'm scared of it all, God's truth! so I am;
"It's too big and brutal for me.
"My nerve's on the raw and I don't give a damn
"For all the 'hoorah' that I see.
"I prowl in the canyons of dismal unrest;
"I cringe—I'm so weak and so small.
"I can't get my bearings: I'm crushed and oppressed
"With the haste and waste of it all.
"The slaves and the madmen, the lust and the sweat,
"The fear in the faces I see:
"The getting, the spending, the fever, the fret—
"It's too bleeding cruel for me."

"I guess that expresses the way a lot of us feel nowadays, Miss Robinson. And I, for one, want to take my few thousands and slip away into the wilderness somewhere and lose myself for the rest of my life. No one would miss me—I've never been important enough to count. So why shouldn't I?"

EDWARD J. K.

Stick—or run away?

Yes, a lot of us do feel like that nowadays, Ed. And poor fools like myself, who have to write about it all and try to make some sense out of it—I suspect we feel that way oftener and worse than any of you. To duck out . . . go some place where they've never heard of politics and let 'em finish this dog fight for themselves . . . man, oh, man, that would certainly be G-R-A-N-D! And yet—

I hope I never do it. I'll kick myself through all eternity if I do. And it isn't because I think I'm practicularly important. I know I'm not. Not one out of ten thousand of us is particularly important. But we've a job to do—and that IS important.

Meaning what? Meaning it's up to us, no matter how dumb we are individually—it's up to us to KEEP THE FAITH that started this nation—the flame they handed on.

Why are we here? Where are we going? What should we do about this present mess? None of us knows the answers. Day after day I write—and am sick at heart as I write, for I don't know what to say. Yet there's one thing I CAN do—I CAN KEEP ON BELIEVING.

I can keep on believing that we ARE innately decent . . . ARE worth while . . . that there IS a plan and a purpose behind all this pandemonium . . . that somewhere GOD IS, and knows what it's all about.

Editor Takes a Walk.

WHEN a newspaperman takes a stroll across the country, 3,507 miles of country, that's news.

Charles F. Lummins, retired editor of the Chillicothe Scioto-Gazette did just that "for recreation and observation," starting in the fall of 1884.

His Ohio-to-California hike was accomplished after breaking an arm in an Arizona canyon, reducing the fracture himself then carrying the arm in a sling. While the bone was knitting, Lummis spent long periods among Pueblo indians, learning their traditions, folklore and language, all of which he later incorporated into books on history, verse and fiction.

Health And Diet

Rare or Well-Done? Science Answers.

—By DR. CLENDENING

Is there any scientific basis for a preference for rare or well-done meat?

Experimental studies of the effect on the nutritive value of food from cooking are of comparatively recent date. Morgan and King showed that the more prolonged the heating, the less efficient was meat in maintaining nitrogen balance and in promoting growth in young animals. This confirms the belief of most people that rare meat is the most nutritious. You have to eat more well-done steak or roast beef to get the essential growth-producing qualities.

The proteins in wheat show the same tendency. The nutritive value of the crust of bread is less than that of the crumb. This, however, takes only the wheat protein into account. The starch is just as effective.

The situation is reversed in the high protein vegetables. Beans, peas, lima beans, navy beans and soy beans are notable in the vegetable kingdom as containing high amounts of protein. But if eaten raw, this protein has practically no, or very low, nutritive value. Cooking, however, changes the arrangement of the chemicals so that they can be utilized by the body cells to replace tissue and help in the upbuilding of new cells.

Cooking really helps nutrition in other less direct ways. It improves appetite and also facilitates digestion. An exclusively raw diet is unsuited for man today after his long experience with so-called civilization.

Should a tongue-tied baby be operated on?

Tongue-tie is the condition where the frenum—the little cord in the median line under the tongue—is short or absent or placed so far forward that the tongue cannot be raised or protruded normally. Sometimes the tongue is even forked from this cause.

It usually produces no symptoms or trouble. It never causes difficulty in nursing, never causes delayed speech, and only in rare cases causes any interference with articulation.

The situation is usually discovered by a zealous mother or father.

Usually it should be let alone. The frenum elongates anyway with growth and tongue-tie corrects itself. If the tongue can be protruded to the external margin of the lips, it may safely be let alone.

In severe cases, however, it is not difficult to correct it. The tip of the tongue is raised and the firm tendon-like part of the frenum is clipped. There are quite fair-sized blood vessels running in the frenum and care must be observed to avoid these. Such minor operations are probably done more often than necessary.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Those who sit down with Franklin Roosevelt on Sunday afternoons or at other times when he is really in a relaxing mood, have seen a distinct change in him recently regarding a third term.

Around Christmas time, and even through most of January it was their distinct impression that the president was anxious, even determined to retire from the White House when his term expires in January, 1941.

To one of his cabinet members, Roosevelt in effect remarked:

"This job is getting to be just the same thing over and over again. I send up a message to congress. I prepare a new budget. Just the same old routine. I'm bored and I want to get out."

To another close friend who is mayor of an important city, the president said:

"I feel like a baseball pitcher who's been in the box for eight innings. I'm tired and I need a rest."

To several other friends and visitors, Roosevelt spoke at some length about the need of building up new leaders within the Democratic party. With several he definitely discussed the advisability of nominating Cordell Hull. To one friend who urged the president to run again, he remarked: "There are plenty of men in the country who can take my place."

Roosevelt Changes.

ALL this, however, was prior to about the middle of January or the first of February. Since then there has been a change.

The change is a little hard to put your finger on. Actually, the president isn't saying a word to the effect that he is a candidate, even to his close advisers. But, on the other hand, he is no longer saying that he is tired and wants to get out. He just isn't saying anything.

But he is doing a lot of things. And this is what convinces some of the best friends Roosevelt has, that he has now decided to run for a third term.

For behind the scenes, the president has been familiar with, if he has not actually directed, every move made to put delegates in state primaries favorable to his candidacy. He put his hand abruptly into the Louisiana situation, was delighted with the opportunity to line up delegates in New Hampshire, gave his blessing to the plan by which Ambassador Joe Kennedy would corral delegates in Massachusetts—later to be turned over to him. (Strategy which was spiked when Jim Farley got the jump on Kennedy and filed in Massachusetts first.)

Big Bosses Boost.

ONE factor which unquestionably had a lot to do with the change in Roosevelt is the report which state Democratic bosses have been bringing him.

New Deal idealism is the complete antithesis of all that Boss Ed Kelley of Chicago and Boss Hague of New Jersey stand for. Yet they, and dozens of others who control local machines, are determined that Roosevelt shall run—and for only one reason: they are out to win.

The average state boss makes politics a business. To stay in business, he has to keep his men in office. He has to win. Usually he doesn't care a snap of his fingers about liberalism or conservation or any other ism connected with his party's national ticket, except only that it be able to draw votes. For sometimes it takes a bang-up presidential candidate on the national ticket to put across the local ticket.

And what Mayor Hague and Mayor Kelley are figuring on is that they can win locally if Roosevelt is on their ticket nationally.

So if the big bosses whose income taxes have been probed by Roosevelt's internal revenue and whose gambling friends have been hounded by Roosevelt's justice department—if after all this punishment, they still want Roosevelt, then it must be because he is the man who can win for the Democratic party.

No Announcement.

YOU can write it down in the book that Roosevelt will make no announcement regarding a third term, probably not even five minutes before the Democratic national convention opens July 15.

He will remain in Hyde Park and get the reaction of the convention over the telephone. And probably only after the question of his candidacy has gone to the floor of the convention will he indicate his willingness to run for a third term. And those closest to him these days are betting their money that his answer will be "Yes."

* * *

Fanny and Hottentots.

JOHN L. LEWIS got an unexpected kickback from his ripsnorting assertion that Madame Secretary Perkins knew as much about labor problems "as a Hottentot knows about the moral code."

Two weeks after the convention he received a letter from a foreign missionary reading as follows:

"Dear Mr. Lewis: I cannot let the insult you hurled at the Hottentots pass unchallenged. I have lived and worked among these people for many years and have found on the whole that they have a much higher respect for the moral code than people who live in so-called civilized nations.

"If what you say about Miss Perkins is true, then she also must be a very excellent public servant. I commend her."

Better Than Rent

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

RECENTLY I rapped on the door of a rural home that stood at the intersection of two gravel roads. A lovely grove of elm, maple and oak stood near the southern side. I could see that larger trees had been cut and the splendid young growth had come on since. Beyond this a stream of clear water flowed.

The house was well set back, with dormers above and a newly built addition to the south. The whole exterior had recently had a coat of white paint. The young woman who came to the door had an animated face and a trim look. Two little boys peeped at me from behind her skirts.

"You have a lovely home here," I remarked. "I'm sure you must have done some careful planning and hard work. How long have you had this place?"

"It'll be six years soon now," she said, "since John and I first got a look at this place. We were plumb discouraged with paying rent and all, and we bought this from the school board for cash—$500. John borrowed the money on his life insurance. It was just a plain old boxy schoolhouse, then, and some of our friends snickered at our lack of judgment."

"A stranger could never tell it had been a school," said I.

"No — we've put hardwood floors down right over the old ones, put in partitions, plastered, papered and built on that addition. The upstairs isn't all finished yet. And still, when it has been shut up tight for a while, I imagine I can smell that odor of country schoolhouse. They say as high as 70 scholars went here, at one time. That was 40 years ago, and one man leader [illegible] all of them. John says he wonders what there was about slates and chalk and books and hickory sticks to leave such a lasting smell . . . he says I just imagine it."

"I've noticed many other people living in abandoned schoolhouses," said I, "But yours has most of them beat for nice location."

"We think so too," she said. "I worked in an office before we came here, but this is more interesting. This is our home, built as much out of hopes and dreams as a house can be. Every time we get another improvement added we feel that it is more ours than it was before. It has given us roots in the community, too—we really belong and that's better than moving about every year, collecting rent receipts."
